The Feeling To See

I like to wake up early just in time for the rising of the sun. I like to feel its warmth on my face.

I like to walk along the water front, and taste the kool-aid feeling on my tongue.

I like to roll down the bushy hill, so I can feel the grass as it tickles my feet and hands.

I like to smell the sweetness of the flowers, and sway with them in the wind.

You see it, but I don't;
I feel it because I'm BLIND.

A Mythological Perspective On Why The Sky Is Blue

One afternoon Hera, queen of the gods, was very upset. She was crying because she wanted to be as pretty as Aphrodite, goddess of beauty, and as smart as Athena, goddess of wisdom.

She went to Zeus with her problem and started screaming and yelling at him in much the same manner that mortal wives do to their husbands when they are upset. The situation might not have gotten so out of control at this point if Zeus wasn't just about ready to take his afternoon nap. Being tired to begin with, his mood grew blacker and blacker.

At this time, Poseidon god of the sea, went to Zeus and started complaining that it was getting too cold for him down there. He wanted Zeus to solve his problem. In a fit of uncontrolled anger, Zeus said, "If the water is not hot enough for you, I'll make it so hot you'll never complain again." Zeus began throwing thunderbolts into the sea. The energy in terms of heat and light was so great that it forced the blue color of the water to refect upon the sky and to this day, the sky still holds the blue tint of the sea.

Two Hundred Years Of What?

Two hundred years gone,
Two hundred years of war and killing.
Two hundred years of learning,
Learning, yet still doing wrong,
Learning more ways to hurt.
Making technological advances,
But using them wrongly.
Not helping the needy,
But wasting money on moon-shots and wars.
Knowing how to destroy,
Not learning how to create.

Another two centuries,
Two more centuries to correct our mistakes,
Two more centuries to learn more,
Two more centuries to achieve peace,
Two more centuries to save humanity.

Let us pray we will not have to wait,
Another two centuries!

Struggle

The day was shallow, empty, invaded by superstitious thinking.

There I was staring into translucent visions of space.

I had become accustomed to the day-by-day repetitious sunrises and sunsets, beginning, ending, finally disappearing.

Where has everything gone? Has it vanished for today?

Or will this beauty appear once more, for my eyes to battle with, confront and win?

I knew something was wrong.

Why did the day, ogle me with revolting darkness, resulting in fear and incurable despair?

I decided to initiate a war.

My frightened and disturbed mind had desired a victory over the peculiar sensation I was feeling.

The combat began... and I, I... I lost.

Yes, I lost my battle.

The day won.

His armaments were stronger than my guns, and stronger than my health.

I died.

Escape

People forever escaping,
  Or trying to.
Always searching for the "Great" escape,
  And never quite finding it.
Forever searching,
  Finding things they weren't looking for.
Still searching,
  And losing the things that they did find.
Searching inside the boundaries,
  That bound them.
Then breaking loose,
  And realizing,
That living is better,
  Than escaping.

Rain

(Rain as seen by a boy on a baseball team)

Drat, its raining!

It is really pouring!

There goes our championship game against the next block!

I was counting on playing today.

Oh well, I practiced for nothing!

Drat, its raining!

(Rain as seen by a farmer whose crops need water)

Finally, it's raining!!

I must go and save as much as I can.

The crops were on their last legs, they were nearly dead.

I am so thankful to see rain.

I am going to dance in it and scream praises.

It is absolutely wonderful to see rain, this beautiful product of nature.

Finally, it's raining!!

(Rain as seen by a sensitive nature-lover)

The rain is falling softly.

It falls with a gentle pit-a-pat on my window.

It gently feeds the plants with its wetness.

It bathes the trees with its moisture.

The rain is softly falling.

Snow

(Snow as seen by a child)

The snow falls in a mass of white;

It is very pretty and very cold.

Snow is fun to throw around and to hit people with;

Sometimes, it makes nice round snowballs,

Sometimes, it makes very nice snowmen when it is right.

Snow is fun,

Fun!!

(Snow as seen by a sensitive woman)

Lightly the snow falls with a light pif, pif,

The soft white flakes slowly tumble downward toward the ground,

They tumble down in a soft dance with each other,

Snow makes any place beautiful..

Snow is beautiful,

Beautiful!!

(Snow as seen by a grouchy adult)

When that darn stuff starts to fall, I am ready to fight;

My car gets stuck in that junk when it gets piled up;

When that stuff falls I am late for work;

Dumb kids start to throw snowballs;

Sometimes, it gets slippery and I almost fall.

Snow is annoying,

Annoying!!

The Motorcycle

There are other means of transportation
Besides the four wheeled car.
That need less manipulation
To go fast and far.
What I mean is a motor bike
Which most young people seem to like.
When you are riding in the hot sun,
They are especially a lot of fun.
You can ride them over dirt,
Without a thought of getting hurt.
When your friend slows down with his big Chevy.
You can just zip by when traffic is heavy.
When you have to go far you fill the tank up,
But all you need is only a cup.
A bike to a car is very small,
Quick to start but easy to fall.
I had a friend who loved to ride,
But a speeding car demon broke his stride.
So when you ride you better beware,
Because for you motorist's will not care.

Marcel Marceau At The New York City Center

THE STAFF OF MARCEL MARCEAU:

Administrative Director . . . . . .Alain Mangel

Stage Manager . . . . . Antoine Casanova

Assistant Stage Manager . . . . . Bruno Clementin

MARCEL MARCEAU has loved mime since his childhood. Mime is the silent art of body language. Marceau uses his body as a tool for getting his message across to the audience, which is entirely absorbed by every one of his expressions and movements. An example of this is a pantomime of his entitled "The Maskmaker". In this he not only goes through all of the motions of making each mask, but in trying each one, his transformation becomes physically visible to an astounded audience. His facial expressions are so detailed that he makes everything he does more than believeable. I tend to believe that he borders somewhere between a mime and an illusionist.

Marceau's alterego, BIP, first appeared in France about twenty-six years ago. Marceau considers Bip to be a "Blood Brother" to Chaplin's "Little Tramp", Buster Keaton's "Sailor" and Stan Laurel's "Sad One". As Bip, Marceau's mishaps and adventures are universal and timeless. As a sea sick traveler, he makes the audience believe that he is sick to his stomach. As a baby-sitter or a salesman in a china shop, he reduced the spectator to a sort of hysteria tempered with a feeling that he still exists by sheer luck.

In "The Public Garden," Marceau fills an imaginary park with all of its familiar types of people, completely and instantly catching the essence of fourteen or fifteen characters. They include two gossiping old ladies, a man with his dog on a leash, children at play, a balloon vendor, a pair of lovers and the inevitable statue on a pedestal. A sense of simultaneity is created, as though all of these people are actually there together.

For the audience there is no longer one man alone against a black backdrop. The invisible passers-by, the unseen vehicles, street hazards --- even the wind, the sun and the air itself materialize. A singular muscular movement, a graceful gesture of the body and the fantastic play of limitless facial expressions, establish a whole new world.

For example, the combat of the juggler, doomed to defeat as his performance proceeds from bad to worse, reaching a climax that can be compared to Don Quixote's futile battle against the windmills.

Marceau has opened a new era for this most fundamental and poetic art form. Not only has he expanded the repertory of pantomime, his artistry has created an interest in mime more widespread than at any time in the history of man's oldest means of communication.

In one man's opinion, pantomime is the basis for all language and Marcel Marceau is the epitome of perfection in this ancient performing art.

Thriller In Manila

It was every bit the Thriller in Manila and more. It was the story of a great champion, of a challenger with a big heart, and of a manager that loved his fighter. So did Muhammad Ali, the World Champion, keep his heavyweight title. Ali will fight again. For Joe Frazier, the former champ, it is doubtful.

Frazier started the fight slowly. Ali took the first four rounds, hitting Joe with combinations and left hooks, But Ali had not thought of the courage, the determination of Joe Frazier. He took the punishment through the next three rounds, while Ali blew kisses at the crowd and kept his left hand in Joe's face keeping him at bay.

Then suddenly, it changed. Jeo Frazier started to smoke, He took the fifth, sixth and seventh. He was swinging his left hook, the blow that had floored Ali before in their first fight. But then Ali showed why he was Champion, stunning Fraizer with a vicious left jab to the head. Ali then took the ninth and tenth, although he began to look tired. There was little sting in those punches that had raised lumps on Frazier's face. At the end of round ten it was even, and after eleven Frazier had inched ahead, but then Frazier started to get careless.

Ali came out in the thirteenth round looking like the Ali of old, before they took his title away. He was dancing in the ring sending jabs at Frazier, then Ali hit him with a solid right to the chin that sent Frazier backwards. In the fourteenth round, one could tell that Ali had his confidence back. The only thing that was keeping Joe from falling was his courage to continue the fight. Then at the start of the fifteenth round, Eddie Futch stopped the fight because he felt his fighter could not continue, ending one of the greatest fights of all time.

There should be some kind of title for Frazier because if it was anybody else that night, Joe would have won. It was Joe's misfortune that he just happened to fight one of the greatest fighters of all time, Muhammad Ali, the Champion of the World.

A Fool I Knew

I saw her there, this sunny day,

Just standing, not a word to say.

Her hair blew softly, in the wind so free,

Like a gull in flight, above the sea.

The sun glowed, with a gleam so bright,

And her hair shined softly, like a glowing light.

Her eyes were blue, as the sky above,

With a twinkle and shine, like a star of love.

The sand below, was white and clean,

Like the snow, but warm, as her heart unseen.

The waves behind, were high and cool,

As though to say, "Go to her, you fool!"

But I could not move, not to go and see,

For I was afraid, that away she'd flee.

The sun now low, yet bright as her hair,

And soft clouds came by, as the tide came near.

The waves calmed down, and the sky turned gray,

Then gone was my love, not a word to say.

My heart now empty, the air chilled cool,

"Why, please tell me, am I such a FOOL???"

Me And Bessie

"I ain't Bessie. Bessie died a lonely woman. She was buried a poor woman with no one to sing over her. I ain't Bessie, but I got a whole lot of Bessie in me." These are the words of Linda Hopkin's star of Broadway's new musical, ME AND BESSIE. Ms. Hopkins, whose background is similar to the character she portrays, is a vivid, believable Bessie Smith.

Steadfast Ms. Hopkins holds the audience to their seats while she sings, "It Ain't Nobody's Bizness if I do." There is hand clapping and foot stomping to the beautifully soulful sound of "Put It Right There." Ms Hopkins continues to narrate the story of Bessie's life through songs. The audience empathizes with the plight of black entertainers, the strict limits that were placed upon them in terms of places where they could appear and audiences they could perform to.

One of the most moving scenes was when Bessie's man, J-Gee, played by Lester Wilson, left her. She called out to him as he left, but he continued to walk away. She screamed and stomped in rage. The lights dimmed as she sat down at the left side of the stage and cried, cried for her man, J-Gee, to come back to her. From an alto range to a high C in soprano, she sang "After You're Gone," in a flurry of tears, It was magnificent.

Even if you have never heard of Bessie Smith, you will find this show very enjoyable. At the risk of over-repetition, Ms. Hopkins "ain't Bessie, but you know she got a whole lot of Bessie in her."

The Equal Rights Amendment

Editorial by Janice Cohen

The Equal Rights Amendment: A simply stated twenty-eight word amendment which would outlaw discrimination based on sex.

In thsi society there should be no need for such an amendment as the ERA. However, since our society does seem to have a biased approach towards males and females, there is a need for it.

Contrary to majority belief, this Amendment is not only good for women. In fact, many aspects of it can be good for men. It simply declares equality!

Today, if a man wants to stay home and care for his children, it is virtually impossible for him to get a "maternity" leave. However, there are no questions asked when it is the woman who wants this leave of absence. The amendment will allow for a man's leave of absence from his job or business. This, of course, will have no immediate effect and it still will be a personal decision within the family, but, the amendment will provide for the freedom of choice, which is not given now.

Instead of it being the man's obligation to support the wife and family, the Constitution would state it is the obligation of the spouse, the breadwinner. This, in my opinion, is a necessary right of the American people. Why, if the man is making less money than the woman, should it be his responsiblity to support his wife and family? Again, this is a personal decision. The ERA would, in effect, give men the same rights as women in terms of child support.

The recent election in New York and New Jersey showed the popularity of the Equal Rights Amendment to be low. The actual vote is not as important as the symbolic meaning behind it. I guess we have not come as far in equal rights as I thought. The ignorance of the American people is showing. One argument that people give against the ERA is that it will ruin the American way of life. But, what is the American way of life? Is it the man going to work and the woman staying home to clean and care for her children? After all, what is wrong with a sociological change anyway? People are just afraid. The women are afraid that if they don't do their thing at home, their husbands won't need them. The men are afraid of having their masculinity threatened. These are not good excuses because it just isn't a realistic fear.

Another aspect which will be changed as, a result of the amendment, is the drafting process during a declared war. As it stands now, the male is the only one required to go to war. With this amendment, it will also be the the obligation of the female to go and "fight for HER country." Again, this change only furthers the creation of equality.

The question of whose responsibility the children should be after divorce will also be changed by the amendment. As the situation is now, it is automatically the mother who gets custody. The amendment will make the child's custody the option of the court. After all, why shouldn't the father have the same rights as the mother?

Why is it that a woman's job is never considered as important as her husband's? And, why is it, if the children in the family get sick, it is the woman who must stay home from work to care of them? Many male and female chauvinints reply, "...Because the woman's place is in the home, of course!" We need a change, We need equality. The Equal Rights Amendment can do it!

A Review Of Selected Stories By Edgar Allen Poe

In my opinion, Edgar Allen Poe's short stories are for readers who enjoy the bizarre. Poe himslef led a bizarre existence filled with pain and sorrow. This seems to lend itself to the horror and madness one finds in his stories. The depravity of his characters appear to be a reflection of his own personal life. I suggest that he may have written as a means to release for his own misery.

Poe's stories are very descriptive and detailed. His stories are by no means easy to read. His choice of words sometimes foreign, are often complex and difficult, yet one finds one must read on to ascertain what diabolical end he has in store. The reader gets caught up in the plot of his stories. The reader becomes appalled by what has taken place. There does not seem to be any obvious reason for the characters' deeds, except to say they are made, evil, cunning people who are so sure of themselves that they go so far as to brag when confronted by authority, almost wanting to disclose the horrible deeds, yet holding back for fear of being found out. The characters are apparently harmless, such as the old man in "The Tell Tale Heart" or gentle animal lovers as the "The Black Cat". In "The Tell Tale Heart," the murderer claims to love the old man. He even says, "I loved the old man, he never wronged me. He has never given me insult." Yet because of his illness, he finds fault in the old man's eye, almost looking for a reason to excuse the horrible crime he has planned to commit.

In his story "The Black Cat," the drunk has compassion for both his animals and his loving wife, but his excessive drinking causes his mind to become twisted and he finds himself doing things which normally would be repulsive to him.

In each of Edgar Allen Poe's stories, we are aware that justice triumphs. He avoids having the villain caught until the very end. The character's self-confidence is so overwhelming that he no longer tends to be cautious and for that reason even with his cunning and planning, he always gives himself away.

What makes Poe a great short story writer is his singleness of purpose. Everything he writes goes toward one goal, to horrify his reader. Poe's stories are rich with meaning and mystery. Perhaps this explains why his greatness or "madness" has endured until today, still chilling interested readers.

CONAN

The Stranger

A chill swept through the city; the moon faded behind dark clouds. The parks were patched with early snow. The leaves that were left over from autumn rustled in the wind.

As I crossed a street near my home, I slipped and fell on the slick sidewalk. I fell awkwardly. The side of my head hit the concrete first, then my body followed tumbling over. While picking myself off the ground, I saw an eerie looking man. He had no special features. He had the kind of face that would fade in a crowd. Except for his eyes, I'll never forget those piercing eyes. I started to shiver. I had the feeling he could see right through me.

The silent night seemed to stand still. I tried to get home, but after walking a short distance I began to feel dizzy. I closed my eyes and shook my head in an attempt to clear it. The strange man appeared again. He started to laugh in a hideous, hysterical roar. Was he laughing at me? I looked to see, but he was gone!

I glanced up and down the street; but the whole area was desolate. While trying to figure how he had disappeared, other thoughts entered my mind. My body wasn't bruised; I didn't even feel any pain. That had been some fall I had taken, but I didn't feel a thing. I thought about this for a few minutes. Nevertheless, there wasn't any answer to be found. In dismay, I shrugged my shoulders and proceeded home.

As I neared my apartment building, I noticed people poking their heads out of windows and neighborhood kids running down the block. While watching them, I heard a siren. I looked in the direction of the sound. It was an ambulance followed by a police car. Back where I had fallen, the vehicles came to a stop. By this time, a huge crowd had formed. A doctor was pushing his way past the crowd, while an attendant ran to the back of the ambulance and pulled out a stretcher. Two policemen were pushing the people out of the way. I glanced at my watch and noticed the time. It was six-thirty. I couldn't stay around and watch any longer. Mom had told me to be home by six. I was late already.

I started up the stairs to my building, when my sister Terri scrambled out the door. "Hey Tess" I yelled, but she kept on running. I put my books down on the stairs and went after her. "Hey Tess, wait up." I almost caught up to her, when I heard my brother Peter. He was calling Terri. I turned and looked back to Tess, but she was facing the crowd.

She was hopping up and down trying to see what was going on. When Peter reached me, I jumped in front of him and tried to grab his arm. He ran past me. "Peter", I yelled after him. If he heard me, he didn't show it. By this time I was so upset with everyone, I didn't even care about what was going on.

I turned and ran to my house, then I dashed up the stairs. As I opened the door to my apartment, I called to my mother, but there wasn't any answer. How could that be, mom was always home. She's always doing something around the house, she hardly ever goes out. I threw my books on the couch and started for the kitchen. What a weird day I was having, first a man laughing at me because I had fallen, then Terri and Peter ignoring me and now mom not being home. As I entered the kitchen, I did a double-take. There was mom by the sink washing her dishes. I guess she didn't hear me. "How was your day, mom?" I said.

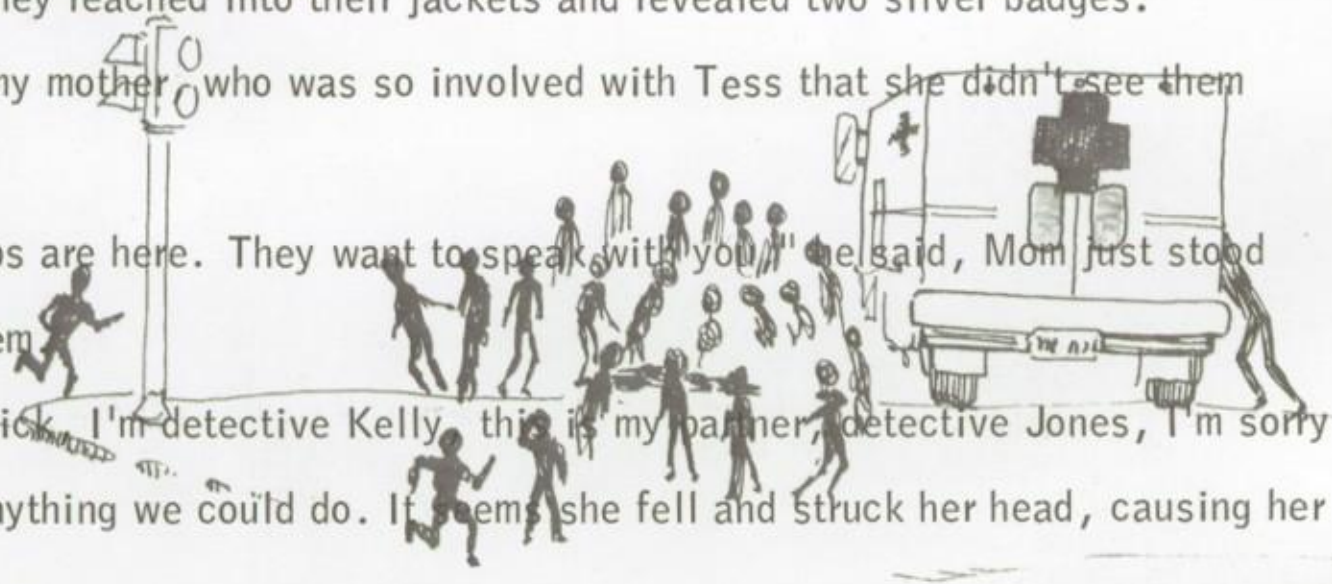
She just stood there and continued washing her dishes. I was just about to ask her if she and everyone else had gone deaf, when my sister burst through the door.

She screamed, "Mom, mom." She was crying and choking on her sobs. My mother rushed to her and held her to her chest.

"What's the matter" mom asked "Take it easy." Terry was so worked up that she couldn't speak.

Peter came in a few minutes later, followed by two men who were dressed in dark suits. As they entered, they reached into their jackets and revealed two silver badges.

Peter went to my mother who was so involved with Tess that she didn't see them enter.



"Mom, two cops are here. They want to speak with you," he said, Mom just stood there staring at them.

"Mrs. Fitzpatrick, I'm detective Kelly, this is my partner, detective Jones, I'm sorry but there wasn't anything we could do. It seems she fell and struck her head, causing her neck to break."

My mother started to shake. "Oh my God, no," was all she could say. She kept repeating it over and over again.

Alberto Colmbani

I couldn't believe what was going on. This was all a bad dream; I'll wake up.

I called to my mother, "Mom, its not true, I'm here."

My mother started towards me. My heart beat faster; its really not true; she's coming to me. But she didn't come to me, she went past me. She was going to my father, who was standing in the doorway. His face was pale and his shoulders were hanging limply.

My mother reached him, and they stood in the doorway with their arms around each other. Then to my surprise, my father started to cry. I never saw my father cry before. I just stood there stunned.

As I stared at them, I saw a figure in the shadows out in the hall. I tried to see who it was. He motioned for me to come out. I stood glued to the floor. He started towards me and as he neared, I realized who he was. It was the man who laughed at me when I had fallen, the man who mysteriously disappeared.

"Who are you?" I demanded.

His face turned into a soft smile, and his eyes didn't seem strange anymore.

"Who are you?" I cried.

"I am Death," the man replied.

I started to tremble. "Dad help me!" I whimpered.

The man's finger rose to his lips in a motion to silence me.

"They can't hear you," he said in a soft voice, "or me. I'm here to take you away from this place. I was going to take you after you fell, but you didn't believe."

"Didn't believe, didn't believe what?" I asked bewildered.

"You didn't believe you were dead, You saw me as a mean, ugly man. Now you see me as I am."

"How do you know what I'm thinking?"

"I know, I can tell what people are thinking because, I am Death."

"Mom! Dad!" I shouted.

I glanced over at them. While I had been talking to the stranger, they had gone over to the couch. Pop sat staring at the floor, while mom had her face buried in her hands. My heart felt heavy, there was a lump in my throat. There was a gloom hanging over our home and it was because of me.'

I just couldn't stand there and watch everyone hurting any longer. I shouldn't have been there in the first place. I looked toward the stranger. "Where are you taking me?" I asked. His eyes brightened as he answered my question, "Someplace where you will be very happy." "Death is only painful for those left behind." I glanced back to take one last look at my family. "Mom, Pop, Peter, Terri," I sighed. Then the tears came as I followed the stranger out of the building.

That was two years ago when all this took place. I am writing this story to let everyone know, that the stranger was right when he said, "Death is only painful for those left behind."

A Different Kind Of Love Poem

I used tears to get this poem down. There were conflicts within my conscious and unconscious mind. My emotions felt they had alot to say. I asked stars questions and tried to get answers from waters rushing against cliffs. I stared at cold grayness in the loneliness of a winter sidewalk and found a rainbow in an April rain. I walked until my feet ached and came to a dead end, tried walking again and ended up dreaming of fantasies. I found a novel that made me cry silently on a public bus .... The swings in the park helped me to reach the moon and brought me back to deal with the day's end. I found worthless rocks and pretended they were uranium. There was a harvest of wheat that could be spun into gold. There were my priceless paintings and my first vase of flowers...

Going to bed by a city sunset, and hoping to see a sunrise, led to the accomplishment of .... a different kind of love poem.

Pandora's Box Revisited — A Parody

Once upon a time, in fact it was on a Tuesday, the Great Greek, the head of all the Greek Gods, called a meeting of all Good Greeks. The Good Greeks assembled at the top of Mount Olympus, that's the place where all the Biggies hung out. He called the meeting because he was very upset. He had a brand new world that was as great as any new world could be, but something was missing. "We need a spark, some sort of charisma," he told them as he requested ideas. The Good Greeks had a few ideas. The God of Weather Bureau suggested a lighting storm, that special "spark", but the Great Greek vetoed that. The God of Music suggested copies of their latest hit albums, but the Great Greek said no. The world needed something more, something real, something permanent.

The God of Biology had a goodie -- a perfect person. This person would represent every virtue that a human could possibly have. Everyone who looked at this new perfect person would see his own individual conception of perfection. That person would have a clear complexion, a nice singing voice, graceful movements and a creative mind. The person would be friendly, loving and lovable, not to mention brilliant, charming and good looking. That person's name was to be Pandora. So the God of Modern Sculpture and the God of Biology got to work -- and they made Pandora.

Before Pandora was placed on Earth, the God of Light gave Pandora a gift. It was a small wooden box, carved in a beautiful pattern with a lock on one side. The one provision connected with this gift was that it was not, under any circumstances, to be opened. Not even in case of emergency. So armed with the gift and perfection, Pandora was sent to Earth.

At first, Pandora had a wonderful time down on Earth, singing songs, talking with the common folk, and in general, having a good time with perfection and not taking advantage of it. But as time went on, Pandora became very curious about the box. What was in it? It was easy to see that it wasn't locked. So why couldn't it be opened? Pandora began to brood. The box HAD to be opened, it was driving everyone crazy. But the God of Light said that it was not be opened and shouldn't that rule be observed? But what difference would it make anyway? One peek -- one little teeny baby peek -- wouldn't hurt anyone, so Pandora went to the box. The lock was easy to lift, unfortunately.

As soon as the box was lifted, millions upon millions of awful, ugly winged insects began swarming over the area. They flew out so fast that Pandora could not slam the box shut until it was too late. It was easy to see that a terrible mistake had been made.

"Oh my God, what have I done? What have I done?"

At that time, an ugly little bug came over to Pandora and told her what was happening. With a coughing, wheezing voice and unbearable halitosis, it informed Pandora that he and his colleagues were the evil of the world. All the insects would spread things like rape, murder, mayhem, teachers strikes, platform shoes, drug addiction, acid rock music, wars, poverty, Watergate, the defeat of the ERA, the success of the default, inflation, Howard Cosell, robberies, slums, Scholastic Aptitude Tests, income tax, and even something known as the inhabitants of New Jersey.

"We'll even give you Jerry Ford if you stick around awhile!", it laughed.

Pandora felt terrible over the mess that had been made and the common folk felt worse. "You sure did blow your lousy perfection!" The people were a bit upset.

Just then, Pandora heard someone inside the box, requesting in an impatient voice to be let out. Well, what could make anything worse? Pandora opened the box.

"Hey, do you mind? You slammed the door down on my arm! My name is..."

"Don't tell me. Let me guess. You're the geometry regents."

"No, stupid!"

"The English regents, maybe?"

"No. I'm the one sent down here to repair the damage made by those other creeps. So if you'll give me a hand, we'll get to work and start cleaning up the mess."

"Do you think we'll have it done by my birthday?"

"When's that?"

"Thursday."

"Look, I doubt if we'll have it done by your birthday a hundred years from now. But if we get to work, we ought to see some progress before very long, So, come on, let's start cleaning up this place."

Principal's Message

Illustrated by Mr. Mastruzzi

R. Mastruzzi

Dear Graduates:

At the end of last year, following our first June graduation, many of us, including myself, thought that the road ahead would be much smoother and more readily traversed. We had gone through three difficult years getting an enormous high school underway and functioning beautifully. With graduation and the completion of a full year with a senior class, we had done it all. Many of the mechanical problems that had confronted us had been resolved and we should have been in a position where little more was required than to resolve a few of the "rough spots." No one was anticipating the effects of the cataclysmic events that were insidiously brewing in our municipality.

The school year 1975/76 began as a disaster and worsened as it wore on. Drastic budget cuts led to oversized classes, severe reduction in supportive services, reduction of elective offerings, and unconscionable compromise of our security force.

The mid-year reorganization in February saw us lose familiar and revered teachers who had been with us since the school opened in September, 1972. Continued reduction of budgetary capability resulted in excision of additional educational programs which culminated in the demise of the cycle system.

Throughout the debacle the students, especially you, the seniors, remained enthusiastic and confident. You refused to be beaten and persevered in order to retain the high quality educational program we had developed and the fine reputation we had earned. Your undaunted spirit provided many of us with determination and cautious optimism when it was needed most.

The year that you were seniors in high school may one day be recorded as the most difficult ever experienced by the City of New York and its myriad agencies, not the least of which was a beleaguered Board of Education. Always remember that you not only survived, but took the challenge and met it with heads high and courage unwavering. For this, you should be forever proud.

Your last year added another dimension to your education. You learned an awful lot about the hard realities of life. The important thing is that you never forget the developments that took place and the impact they had on you. Don't bemoan and despair, but rather resolve that you are going to make this world a better place in which to live. If this happens, it may all have been worth it.

The occasion of your graduation also marks another memorable occurence. The class of '76 is comprised of some students who were among the first admitted when the school opened. As these young men and women leave, the first chapter in the great story of John F. Kennedy High School is closed. It is a time to which we have all looked forward and are, in a way, sorry to see arrive.

To each graduate, I extend my sincerest wishes for a happy, healthy and productive future. May God bless and keep you always.

business

In this period of economic difficulty, more and more students have turned to the Business Education Department to obtain marketable as well as personal skills. This year's graduates, whether bound for college or work, have acquired the tools of success--skills, knowledge and understanding that will be of invaluable assistance in both their professional and personal pursuits. They will be equipped for varied areas such as secretarial work, accounting, clerical, sales, advertising, business machines, etc.

communications

In Kennedy, Communication Arts is the department for all seasons. If getting a civil service job is what appeals to you or learning to tell a story, classes in Communications are custom-designed to help you succeed. Public speaking, debating, acting for stage, film, or television, directing and, most important of all, listening, learning to make sense of the flood of messages, and contributing in constructive ways to the sounds of living is what we are all about.

Psychology in speech provides opportunities for finding out about yourself; Witches, Wizards and What Not's explores the psychic, the superstition, and the mysterious. Filmmaking and Theatre Workshop offer scope for those who crave to create. There are Communications classes in reading and in scriptwriting, and a winter variety extravaganza and spring varsity show. Some of the enduring principles and the great thoughts of the ages are the subjects of Humanities and Satire on Stage. The soul of John F. Kennedy High School, its dedication to the idea of helping each individual be his best possible self, is perhaps nowhere better satisfied than in the many sided offerings in Communication Arts.

The members of the department of English realize that they have a most serious and challenging task -- to educate young people during their very impressionable teenage years so that they will be able both to contribute to and receive from a society into which they will graduate. Specifically, they must be equipped to comprehend and to communicate in three areas -- literature, writing and technical English.

Faced with this awesome responsibility, the teachers feel that each child must be afforded the opportunity to work to his capacity. For some, this means enriched course work, for others a more average pace, and for some a slower rate of progress. Thus, this department will contribute to creating a more productive generation.

fine arts

The Department of Fine/Applied Art brings a third dimension to everyone: the personal dimension of feeling, sensitivity, empathy.

Specifically, the visual arts seek to involve us in perceiving the world we live in, reacting to what we see and feel and interpreting our emotions, feelings and insights through a variety of visual media.

At JFK we offer three aspects of ART as a subject:

The making of works of art, exploring many materials and processes,

The knowledge of art objects in relation to our cultures,

The critical evaluation of art products.

In our classes, some of us are prepared for careers in the field of visual arts: art educators, design craftsmen, commercial artists, art therapists, communications, fine artists. All of us, regardless of where our future place in society will be, are better equipped for life because of experiences shared in art classes.

The Staff of the Department of Fine Applied Art believe that we possess in the principles of Art an antidote to the forces of destruction that now threaten the existence of the human race. The principles of creative activity are based on the natural instinct for order. Art is the name that we give to the only human activity that can establish a universal order in all we do and make, in thought and in imagination. EDUCATION THROUGH ART IS EDUCATION FOR PEACE.

industrial arts health careers

N. Shoopak

Industrial Arts courses are designed to expose high school students to the technological side of our society. "Hands on" experiences with wood, metal, plastics, printing ink, and paper, electrical devices, etc. gives a feeling for the materials and processes while discussions about employment opportunities and leisure time activities spark interests in vocational and hobbies. Lo and Behold! Here is a place to use the math and science you've been studying!

M. Parsons

The Health Careers are a devoted group. Starting in the tenth grade, everyone has been plugging to become Nurses, Dental Lab Technicians, and Dental Office Assistants. It is just the beginning for almost everyone. These areas require two to four years of college, or more, before anything can be done in the field.

language

E. Maynard

The efforts of the Foreign Language Department are directed toward bridging the communication gap among people in our multi-lingual society. Our students are actively involved in and exposed to the culture of the people whose language they study. This involvement is achieved by means of pen pal correspondence, field trips, guest speakers, records and tapes.

F. Raimondo

At the present time five foreign languages, Spanish, French, Italian, Hebrew and German are offered. Our students are made aware that a basic knowledge of a foreign language is an asset to the individual, regardless of his choice of a future job or profession. mathematics Mathematics is essential to understanding and applying science and technology. It is becoming increasingly important in other fields such as psychology and economics. The fantastic advances in space exploration would have been impossible without mathematics.

Our Kennedy mathematics curriculum has been planned to provide for the needs of all of its students. In addition to four years of college preparatory math, we offer college level advanced placement calculus. The student who does not choose college may strengthen his skills in Math Lab and gain an understanding of mathematical applications in a variety of fundamental math courses.

music

The music department is unique in that it offers ALL students, including those with handicaps, an opportunity and exposure to a self-fulfilling activity. Keeping in mind that music is a form of expression, it is unique in that it uses time and tone as its vehicle of communication, thereby transcending any language barrior that may exist.

The range of course offerings includes such areas as Electronic music, Percussion, guitar and piano which many schools do not offer. In terms of services rendered, the department is best remembered for its function in music assemblies, graduation, Arista inductions, and Spring and Fall musicales. One of our goals is to involve as many students as possible in the act of music-making.

physical education

A. Stone

On the athletic field, men are vulnerable, but it is precisely because they are no longer isolated from each other. The stresses and strains through which the athlete explores the limits of his potential reach deeply into his being and rip from him any pretense, duplicity or artificiality. The struggle to become is a highly visible process. . . . Ultimately, it is perceived as a struggle to win, to dominate or to succeed; it can devastate the vulnerable athlete and unravel the fabric of community. If it is viewed and appreciated as a struggle against a common failing--the inability to be all that we are--it can weld friendships and produce a communality bound together on the most fundamental of levels: the uncompromising respect and appreciation due all individuals as unique human beings.

M. Taub

The Girl's Health and Physical Education course of study at John F. Kennedy High School has been constructed to provide for the needs and interests of our student body while meeting the graduation requirements of the city and state. Although there are basic pre-requisite courses to be taken by all entering students, each student will find wide opportunities to select electives which will not only be interesting, challenging, and exciting, but will also have lifetime carry-over value as well.

science

Few schools in the United States offer science courses other than biology, chemistry and physics. Fewer still offer the wide variety of science electives available to students at John F. Kennedy High School. These electives which include such courses as Animal Behavior, Human Behavior, Invertebrate Zoology, Advanced Topics in Biology, Meteorlogy, History of Science, and Environmental Science provide not only the science minded but also the non-science minded student with the opportunity to explore and investigate those specific areas of science which are of special interest.

Vital to our science program is the role of the laboratory. Fortunately, our outstanding laboratory facilities enable us to provide our students with sufficient related laboratory experience so that they may develop the necessary skills and knowledge required in better understanding the process of science. Consequently, a number of our students have been able to successfully conduct their own research projects for which they achieved city-wide recognition.

Finally, our efforts to motivate our students to better understand and appreciate the career implications of science are meeting with substantial success. As of now, a significant number of our graduates are continuing to pursue their science studies beyond high school. with an eye towards establishing their life's work in one of the many science related fields.

The Guideance Department plays a very important role in the life of all the students.

Aside from helping students plan and prepare their programs regarding the course of study to be taken, the Guidance Counselors assists students in their social adjustments in school. They also assist them in making concrete plans for their future. Future plans include career choices, selection of colleges and other institutions of learning upon graduation.

John F. Kennedy's school library -- media center is organized for functional use by and for the John F. Kennedy family.

Materials for fun, materials for research, for enrichment, for self - help, and for stimulating creativity all are available in every form of media. Paperbacks and magazines are heavily used at J.F.K. Film loops and recordings run very close in student use.

At present the library houses thousands of books, filmstrips records, tapes, pictures and slides available for use during free time.

Physically Handicapped

Teachers and students in the Special Education classes are proud of their acceptance into the mainstream at Kennedy High School.

Started as a small group when Kennedy opened in September 1972, we have grown into a large, well functioning division where remedial help and resource work is stressed. All high school grades are represented in this group.

All of our students attend gym classes, reading and math labs, and other classes in which they can succeed. For those students with a learning problem, our program offers an alternate method of study and a possibility of graduation. We also have a special careers program that prepares our students for a career in the hospitals, in research laboratories, or in animal husbandry. This program is to supplement the regular career programs in which our students participate, such as auto mechanics, wood finishing, and metal jewelry manufacturing. The teachers in this program who do remedial work are Marcia Grandwetter and Rita Schwartz. Patricia Cook conducts the para-medical program. All three teachers act as guidance counselors and liasons with the subject teachers of the mainstreamed classes. They work under the auspices of the Bureau for the Education of the Physically Handicapped under the direct supervision of Ann Kasper and Marcus Arnold.

In 1973 the Special Education classes were expanded to include Deaf and Hard of Hearing students. Mrs. Joyce Greer and Ms. Jeanine Forman are the teachers who provide instruction in English and Social Studies in a small class setting to meet individual needs. Tutorial help in other subjects is also provided. Guidance problems are also brought here and program plans are made. There are presently 25 students enrolled in this program through the Bureau for Hearing Handicapped children under the direction of Dr. John D. Harrington.

CAMERA SHY: Mark Evans, Mark Stern, and Alfredo Colon

The football team, coached by Elliot Vines, compiled a 3-4-1 record in the A division. Mr. Vines, who was the Daily News Coach of the Year and the founder of the football team, stated that there were costly mental mistakes made this year that cost them two or three games. There is rumor that Mr. Vines may give his coaching job to Mr. Taub.

Girls Gymnastics Team

The season for this team has just begun and they are off to a good start. Under Coach Rona Bigam, the team has competed twice and won twice. The biggest hurdle they will have to overcome on the path to success will be Van Buren High School. Gymnastics is a very demanding sport and requires constant practice after and before school.

Boys Gymnastics Team

The Boys Gymnastics Team is composed of a group of determined, limber, and strong willed boys. They compete with many schools throughout the city, in order to keep the great name of John F. Kennedy High School.

1ST ROW; Glenn Carter, Errol Thybulle, Kevin Mitchell, Aaron Hall, Ray Williams 2ND ROW; Ivan Medrano, Walter Knox, Walter Cruz, Wilfredo Ruiz, Alberto Melendez

Girls Softball Team

The Girls Softball Team had a very successful opening season last year and they are very anxious to start the new '76 season.

Under the supervision of coach Denise McFadden the girls are hoping to enter the city championships and bring Kennedy recognition for another outstanding team. The girls have a very strong team and are confident that they will beat the competition around the intermural circuit.

Girls Basketball Team

The girls basketball team, which is coached by Ms. Hammels, is having a great year. They have won seven games and lost one. If they don't lose their last game, they will be first in their division, and if they lose they will be second. They will make the Citywide Playoffs in Madison Square Garden. The team's motto is "press and pester". Using this style of defense, the girls have kept the opposing teams to low scores, while their scores have gone into the high seventies.

Boys Bowling Team

The bowling team, in its third year, compiled a two and eight record in the toughest division in the city. One of the highpoints of their season was when they beat the girls bowling team for the first time in three years. Coach Ken Siverman expressed disappointment at their record because they bowled so well in practice and so poorly in actual competition. The team meets on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Any student who can bowl approximately one hundred and fifty in a trial performance may be elligible.

The tennis team consists of seven students who are regular starters. Kennedy's home ground for their tennis team is Inwood Park. The coach for this team is Mr. Ganzel. The group is looking forward to a good season because of newcomers on the team. Our tennis team has played against many high schools. "We lose some, but win many!"

Boys Basketball

Under Coach Paul Greben, the boys basketball team sported a 14-4 record. Our team has already beaten Lehman three years straight and a victory next year will make the Thanksgiving Day Trophy ours on a permanent basis. At present there are thirteen boys on the varsity with any talented student elligible to join "The Big Red Machine". Practice is Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 3:30.

Baseball Team

Coached by Neal Baskin, the baseball team acheived a record of nine wins and nine loses in the A Division last year. The team finished third in the Monroe Tournament by beating a very strong team from Syracuse New York. Mr. Baskin said that the team has higher prospects for next year and hopefully they will make the city playoffs.

Soccer Team

The John F. Kennedy Soccer Team had their best season this year. In regular tournament competition they had eight wins, one loss and three ties. Two out of three ties were with their arch enemy Clinton. In the Bronx Division, the boys won the playoff spot and then went on to the city playoffs, first against Newtown and then against Clinton and then Long Island City.

Wrestling Team

The wrestling team acheived a 2-3 record in the toughest division in the city. All their matches were close and Coach Defronzo felt that the team put a good deal of effort into their competition. The outlook for the coming season is bright.

Girls Volleyball

Coached by Rosemarie Romero, this team went on to the City Finals this year. There are fifteen girls on the team and any female Kennedy student is elligible. At present the team consists of fifteen girls and meets after school four days a week from three to five.

1ST ROW: Jeannie Watson, Syliva Watson, Rowena Baloy, Celest Palmer, Elaise Meyers, Emily Coca, Gatsby Contress 2ND ROW: Ms. Romero, Adreinne Orback, Florence Richey, Pat Ritzpatrick, Collen Wright, Mercedes Toca Haein Kim, Kim Ralson, May Chen

Girls Track Team

The girls team, under the direction of Cathy Hammels, sports a 33-1 record for a period of three years. The huge forty-five member team won their divisional championship this year and placed second in the entire city. Cathy Hammels was modest when she recounted her all city victories in the one hundred yard dash, the 440 yard relay, the quarter mile and the shot put.

This club put on two shows this year: FANTASY AMERICAN STYLE, a musical variety review and GUYS AND DOLLS. When the group is working on production they meet periods seven and eight with rehearsal running through until five o'clock. Between Mr. David Gonya and Ms. Ruth Zerman, the crew benefits from expertise on every aspect of play developement. With "a little less temperament and a little more talent, what a truly delightful club it would be."

Stage Crew

The stage, lighting and sound crew is supervised by Larry D'Addona. They take credit for all the special affects during our school shows. The musicals, talent shows and school plays account for some of their work, with many more to come.

The Leaders Club is designed to recognize and develop leadership ability in physical education. Leaders help prepare lessons for gym classes as well as conduct these gym classes. Leaders also provide service to the school such as ushering at school functions.

This year has been a time of change for those at Kennedy and the world around. As we leave, our lives will continue to change and grow as we branch out towards the new lives that now await us. We hope that this book will bring you memories of how our '75-'76 school year has enlightened and enhanced our lives.

Have a nice forever,

Marian Francois and Diane Carvalho
